INTRODUCTION

NSW Maritime is committed to serving the boating community. One key area where that commitment is being delivered is infrastructure.

For more than 10 years, New South Wales Maritime has delivered improved boating facilities statewide under a grants initiative now titled the Better Boating Program. This program started in 1998 and has since provided more than $25 million in grants to fund more than 470 boating facility projects across NSW.

From small works like upgraded dinghy storage racks to large boat launching facilities with dual access ramps, pontoons and car/trailer parking, NSW Maritime is working with partners such as councils to fund dozens of projects every year.

This work directly benefits boating groups with the delivery of safer and more convenient access to our wonderful waterways. Those benefits also flow on to local communities and business, as the Better Boating Program projects often help underpin local tourism and recreational activities.

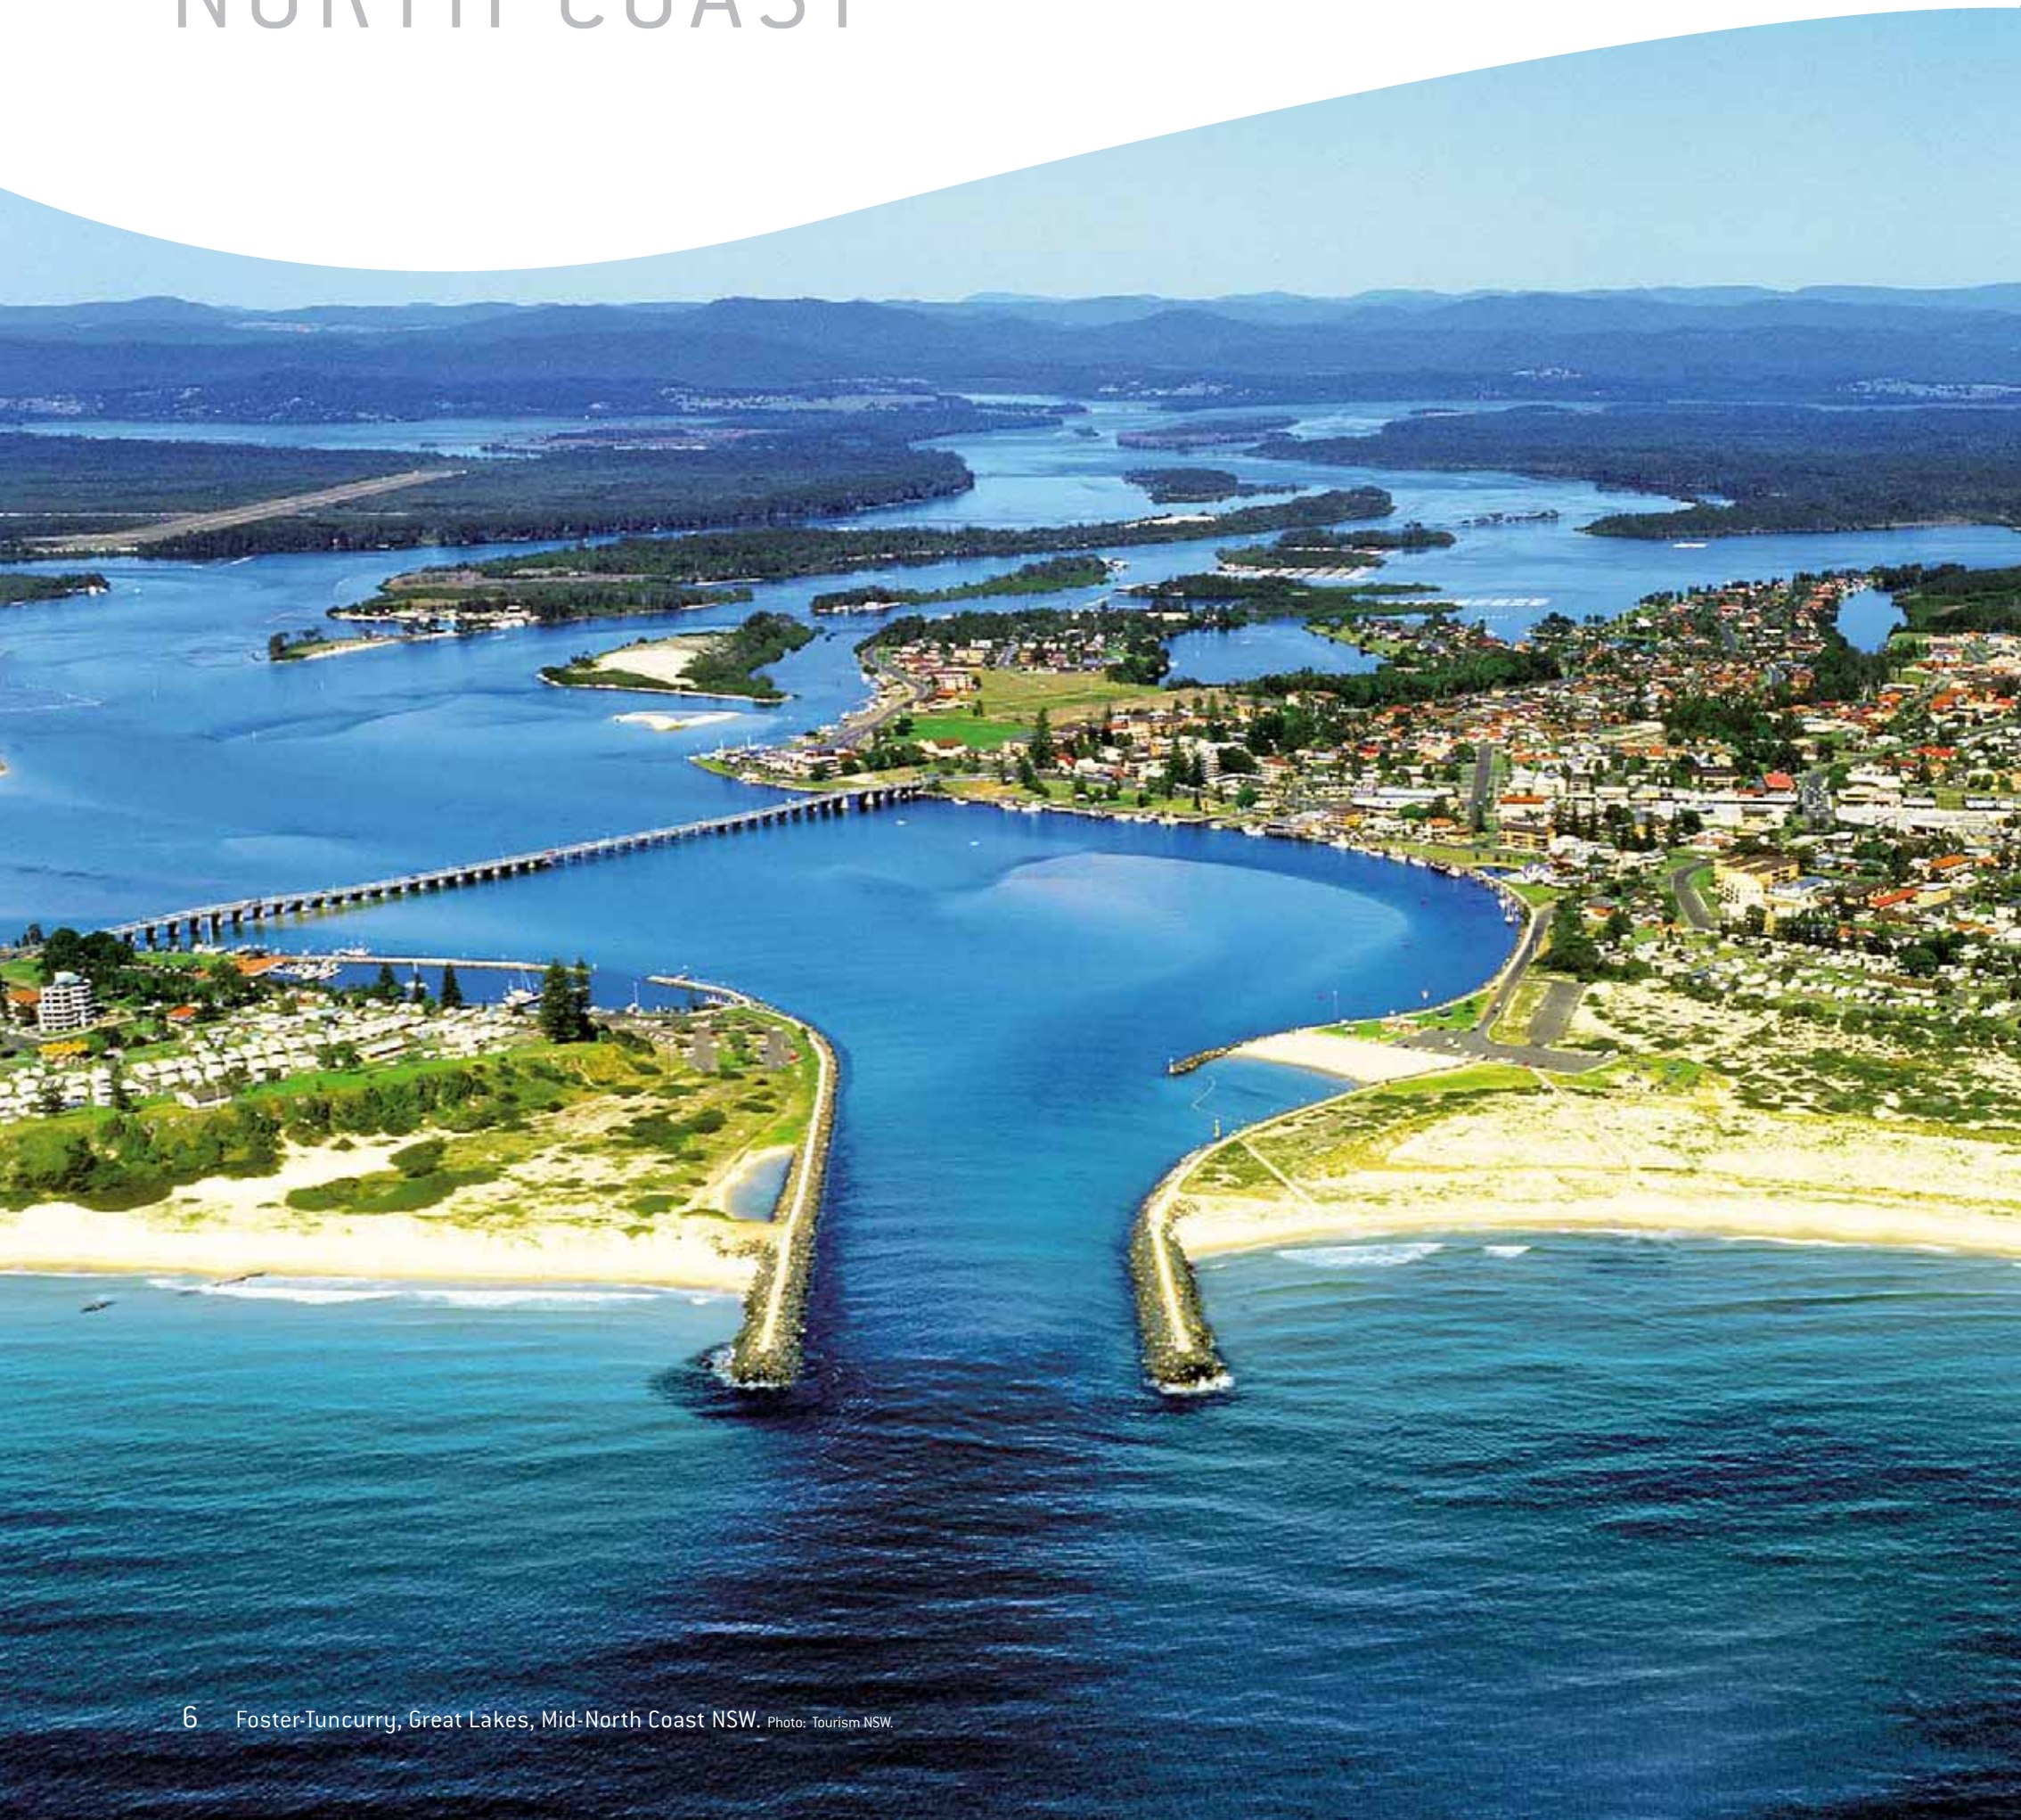

Each year, NSW Maritime invites applications for grants under its funding scheme which is currently $5 million per annum, with a total commitment of $25 million over five years. Applications are assessed by a panel that includes representatives of boating and stakeholder groups and are judged on criteria chosen to encourage better and safer access to waterways.

The aim of the Better Boating Program is to provide waterways infrastructure for the boating community and improve public access to waterways. Additional benefits include better access for people with disabilities, safer public wharves, which may be used in conjunction with local ferry services, and opportunities to encourage and promote maritime precinct developments which meet community expectations and help create maritime related jobs.

NSW Maritime will continue to work with local councils, State agencies, boating organisations and community groups to deliver new and upgraded boat ramps in areas of highest need and demand through the Better Boating Program.

NSW Maritime will also seek to ensure planning instruments and policies have regard for the community's need for maritime infrastructure and cater for ongoing growth in boating and water sports.

NORTH COAST

The North Coast of New South Wales is home to massive waterways – both fresh and salt water – and caters to all types of boating enthusiasts.

With approximately 500 kilometres of sparkling coastline, the region has impressive rivers, an abundance of estuaries and safe havens.

From rowing on the mighty Clarence River to fishing offshore, the region provides an abundance of opportunities for boating in a climate that is often ideal for being outdoors.

HUNTER / INLAND

The Hunter River catchment is one of the largest in New South Wales and reaches further inland than any other catchment, covering an area of approximately 22,000 square kilometres. Originating in the Mount Royal Range, the Hunter River is 300 km long and enters the sea at Newcastle.

Newcastle's Lake Macquarie is the largest coastal saltwater lake in Australia, covering an area of 110 square kilometres – twice the size of Sydney Harbour.

North of Newcastle, Port Stephens is NSW's largest estuarine waterway area, mangrove area and saltmarsh area – and lays claim to the title 'dolphin capital of Australia'. Whether it's for diving, fishing, sailing or other types of boating, this waterway has it all.

And of course, the inland region is huge and is host to a range of rivers, catchments and dams.

HAWKESBURY / BROKEN BAY

Broken Bay comprises three arms, the prominent estuary of the Hawkesbury River in the west, Pittwater to the south, and Brisbane Water to the north. These three arms are flooded rivers formed at a time when the sea level was much lower than it is at the present day.

With five rivers and more than 70 per cent of the area being National Parks, the Hawkesbury is a haven for adventure and nature lovers. Whether it's water skiing, wake boarding, a cruise on the paddlewheeler, a houseboat weekend or canoeing, there are plenty of ways to enjoy the Hawkesbury.

Pittwater is generally accepted to mark the northernmost extent of the greater Sydney area, the Northern Beaches. Pittwater's calm waters make it a popular sailing area.

Brisbane Water, at the northern arm of Broken Bay is mostly shallow and tidal. The inlet narrows at 'The Rip' which has a rapid tidal current. The waterways are renowned for their rich aquatic life; sea weeds, mangroves, oysters, sharks and rays. Good populations of fish are also present in these waters.

SYDNEY REGION

Sydneysiders are fortunate to have on their doorstep not only the famous Harbour and beautiful northern waterways of Hawkesbury and Broken Bay, but also an extensive network of coastal inlets, bays and rivers in the southern part of the Sydney Region.

Botany Bay is a popular recreational boating location which doubles as a busy port; almost all of Sydney's commercial shipping passes through Port Botany. Despite the traffic, Botany Bay has a diverse marine population and the area around its entrance provides some of the best scuba diving in the Sydney metropolitan area. The world's largest population of Weedy Seadragon was found at the 'Steps' dive site, on the southern side of the Botany Bay National Park.

Feeding into Botany Bay from the west is the Georges River, which offers many more recreational boating opportunities.

Further south, Port Hacking combines unspoilt wetlands and marine grasses, shoals and tidal waterways. They are interlinked with a national park of great cultural significance and natural heritage importance. Port Hacking is one of Sydney's most beautiful waterways and there's loads to do on and in the water.

SYDNEY HARBOUR

Commonly referred to as the most beautiful harbour in the world, Sydney Harbour's 240 kilometres of shoreline encompasses approximately 54 square kilometres of water.

On a warm sunny day, the harbour is a vibrant blue and dotted with hundreds of sailing boats, cruise boats and ferries. As the focal point of the city, Sydney Harbour's beaches, coves, bays and waterside parks offer welcome release from the rigours of urban life.

Sydney Harbour is both city playground and means of transport, as well as serving as a major port for international cruise ships and naval vessels. In a State so richly endowed with beautiful waterways, Sydney Harbour is one of the most beautiful jewels in NSW's crown.

SOUTH COAST

The unspoilt natural beauty of the southern coastline of New South Wales unfolds in a series of bays and coves with spectacular waterways like the Shoalhaven River in the north to Twofold Bay in the south.

Batemans Bay is a renowned fishing spot – having seen several world and Australian records for local game fish caught. The pristine Clyde River – said to be the cleanest of all the major rivers on Australia’s east coast – flows into Batemans Bay.

Inland, the Snowy River flows from the high country down to the coast. Australia’s high country is home to spectacular peaks, clear mountain streams and cool, crisp air. Fishing for trout in mountain streams, lakes and deep dams is a popular pastime. The lower Snowy River has sandy beaches and broad deep stretches of water, making it a wonderful place for canoeing and camping.

MURRAY / SOUTHERN TABLELANDS

The Murray River basin of 1,057,000 square kilometres is about one-seventh of the total area of Australia and comprises three-quarters of New South Wales. The mighty Murray River is Australia's longest single river at 2,375 kilometres.

In the past, the Murray was busy with steamboats facilitating commercial trade. Today most traffic on the river is recreational, with water-skiing and fishing being popular pastimes. Houseboats are also common, both commercial for hire and privately owned, and the historic paddle steamers still offer cruises in some areas.

Australia's third longest river, the Darling, measures 1,472 kilometres from its source in northern NSW to its confluence with the Murray River at Wentworth in southern NSW. If you include its longest contiguous tributaries, the Darling river system is 2,844 kilometres long, making it the longest inland network in Australia.
